Jap Sniper Can't Keep 240-Pound Marine from Chow

The Jap sniper who kept a 240-pound Marine from chow for a week, was killed by the Associated Press.

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC (Despatched)—Marine Pfc. William R. Smith, 240 pounds and a lot of feeding recently killed a Jap strictly from hunger.

On Arundel Island, the pangs of hunger drove him to offer his bulk as a target for a well-considered Jap sniper, whose fire threatened to keep him and his back outfit buddies from the chow line.

Farm Income Tax Date Near

The income tax collector, always arriving just one jump ahead of Santa Claus, is about to make his rounds again, this time primarily for the benefit of farm residents. Residents of Marion county are reminded that a filed return is due before Dec. 15 for many in the area.

Tax return blanks will be mailed from the local office of the bureau of internal revenue after Wednesday. Officials estimated that some 20,000 from the county will be making returns on or before the fifteenth.

Citizens who filed a return in September and paid a portion of the tax at that time are not required to make another return. The only action necessary for them is to write a check of a similar amount on Dec. 15. Farmers, however, were not required to make a return three months ago. On Dec. 15 they must file a declaration of estimated income and victory tax for the calendar year of 1943 to be followed by an accurate income tax report, as in former years, not later than March 15, 1944.

The victory tax is computed by subtracting $624 from the estimated net farm income of 1943 and multiplying the remainder by 5 per cent.

The actual income and victory tax will be computed not later than March 15 when adjustments may be made for errors in the estimate. Farmers are allowed a 33 per cent leeway in the December estimate.

Other groups liable for a December declaration of tax are: 1—An individual who filed in September and has had an appreciable increase in income. In this case an amended return should be made out estimating the higher income and a higher tax. This is necessary because if his estimate of income and victory tax falls more than 20 per cent below the actual tax, he will face a penalty next March when the final income return for 1943 is filed.

2—An individual who filed in September and has a decrease of income. An amended return in this instance would show a smaller income and a reduced tax.

3—A person, subject to the income tax, who now expects to receive more than $100 in 1943 from sources other than wages or salaries, such as rents and dividends.

If the September estimate remains substantially correct and a taxpayer's marital status remains unchanged, a new declaration of estimated income need not be made in December.

The procedure for changing the declaration and forms for the December estimate are the same as those used in September. Forms are available at the local office of the bureau of internal revenue on the second floor of the Citizens' building at Center and State streets.

The Marion office is in the Eleventh district and is served from Columbus but the local office serves only Marion county.

Members of the armed forces are permitted to wait until March before they are expected to make a return. This rule applies also to service men and women who have been inducted since filing the September return. Members of the armed forces now serving overseas are relieved of the responsibility of filing an estimate until after the completion of the war.

Fuel Oil Coupon Values Announced

Rations of fuel oil will remain unchanged at 10 gallons per unit for periods 2 and 3 which began Nov. 30, 1943. Officials at Columbus announced today.

The coupons are those numbered "2" and "3" in the Class 4, 5 and 6 coupon sheets used by consumers. Class 4 coupons, used mostly by small householders for heat and hot water will continue to have a value of 10 gallons each, while class 5 coupons, used by larger consumers, will be valued at 30 gallons each. Class 6 coupons, given to a limited number of oil for apartment and commercial establishments, will continue to be worth 250 gallons each.

The second heating period extends from Nov. 30 to Feb. 8. Period 3 which started Nov. 30 also, ends on March 14.

Last year's Class 1 and 2 "house-making" coupons for fuel oil are invalid for all purposes, beginning today.

G.O.P. Candidate Wins Kentucky House Seat

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 1—Republicans expressed elation today over the 12,600-vote victory of Chester O. Carrier, Louisville attorney, who defeated yesterday over J. Dan Talbott, Madison Democrat, in winning the congressional seat from the Fourth Kentucky district. Complete but unofficial returns from the 442 precincts in the district gave Carrier 29,834 votes to 17,234 for Talbott.

Republicans said the triumph emphasized that the Nov. 2 state general election in which Simon S. Willis, Ashland attorney, was swept into the governor's office was not an isolated victory.

In 1917-18 few women were employed in ship yards; now seven per cent of the shipyard workers are women.

Double Trouble Hits

Former Marion Co. Man in Pennsylvania

Double trouble came in bunches recently to former Marion county residents, now living in Pennsylvania, relatives here learned this week. As fire swept buildings on a farm owned by Noah Schlicht of Westport, Pa., Nov. 20 the well being used by firemen in a battle against the blaze went dry. Not only were the buildings destroyed but the water supply exhausted, but on the way from a physician's office where Mr. Schlicht was treated for burns, the car in which he was a passenger collided with another car, crossing roads. He and a son-in-law, Dudley Dill, with whom he was riding, suffered injuries, but the face and hands.

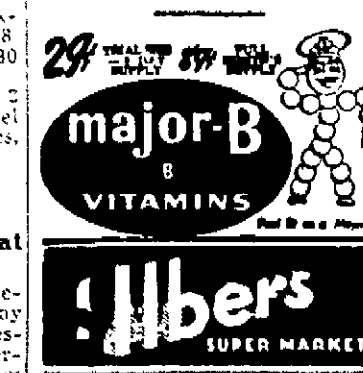

The fire caught from the man's fold of a tractor being used for power to run a hay baler at the Schlicht farm which is located at Caspville Station near Westport. A barn, milk house, granary and machine shed were destroyed together with several hundred bales of hay and contents of the buildings. Word of the fire and injury was received here by a son, Bernard Schlicht of 410 West Co-

Scioto Ordnance Plant Construction Brought War 'Boom' To Marion Although Operations Fell Far Short of Plans

THE SCIOTO ORDNANCE PLANT ADMINISTRATION BUILDING—NERVE CENTER OF THE 12,000-ACRE PLANT.

This is the first of a series of articles reviewing the history of the Scioto Ordnance Plant, now in the final stages of being closed as an ordnance manufacturing point. The series will deal not only with the plant, its development and operation, but with community activities related to the plant and the effect its establishment in Marion county had on lives of residents of Marion and nearby communities.

By BOB BYRD

The Scioto Ordnance Plant, which made a sizeable dent in Marion's history and affected the lives of virtually every person in Marion county, is quickly slipping to a standstill, possibly headed back to the quiet of peaceful rural scene its 12,000 acres presented before thousands of construction workers poured over the grounds in the spring of 1942. Regardless of what the future of the plant may be, it already has made a mark for itself in the county's history. For 120 farm families, it meant giving up homes—homes that for some had been in their families for generations. For many more, it meant jobs with salaries that were boosted by the wartime urgency of speed. For others it meant rent, for city and county officials it meant new problems of health, sanitation, housing and preservation of peace.

And for all of the thousands who might not have been reached as directly as those already mentioned, it at least meant waiting in line for restaurant seats, having to stand on a city bus, or possibly having to wait patiently in traffic during the near-jams that resulted when thousands of workers were leaving the plant at one time.

With all of its effect on the community, however, the plant never approached the large-scale schedule of operations that were intended for it. Marion county residents now can see that the construction period brought the "boom period" it could be called that, as far as the plant's effect on Marion county was concerned, although it was common talk among officials that the construction period was to be only a mild preliminary to the surge of activity that was expected when operations got into full swing.

Far Below Forecasts

Operations never reached more than a fraction of capacity—of the nine sets of buildings constructed for the assembly of fuses and boosters, not more than six were ever used, and not many of these saw more than try-out production. Although employment figures were never announced after production began, the production employment probably never far exceeded the 2,000 mark, whereas in the months the plant was under construction the estimates of its peak employment ranged from 18,000 to 24,000—a three-shift schedule of operations that held the promise of jobs for every person in Marion and nearby counties who wished to work. And it was from this area that the plant expected to draw most of its workers, a big percentage of them women.

Many Marion residents, in the weeks since plans to close the plant were announced, have expressed the opinion that Marion can count itself fortunate that the original plans for the plant's magnitude never developed. They were thinking of what a strain would have been placed on housing and transportation facilities, business places and the community in general if 20,000 persons had been given jobs.

They were thinking also of plans the federal government had made to build some 1,500 houses in the vicinity of the plant, had it gone on to its intended heights of employment—and of the effect these houses would have had on Marion property in general after the war when the big plant and the large number of workers were no longer needed.

Essential Preparedness

There have been many criticisms of the plant since it was begun, but in fairness it must be pointed out that when original plans were set up, the war clouds were much darker than they now are. There was some question whether Japan could be prevented from launching a frontal attack on the west coast of the United States. Army officials pointed out that if the war had taken a sudden reverse for the allied nations at that time, the Scioto Ordnance Plant would have been needed to produce at capacity—and perhaps more. Also, they pointed out that Scioto probably was intended from the beginning as a reserve-capacity plant—to be used only if unexpected developments came in the war that made its use necessary. As one army officer put it, "In war, you have to be prepared for every eventuality. If there's a possibility that a certain plant will be needed, you have to build it; you can't wait until you need it and then throw a plant together overnight. Of course war is expensive, but if the war had gone badly for us, the Scioto plant would have been needed badly, and would have been worth to our cause many times its cost. As matters worked out, the plant has done much useful work although it was laid out to do much more if necessary."

Original Plans Slashed

The story of Scioto is one of retrenchment virtually from the beginning. Originally some 16,000 acres were to be involved in its sprawling site, but a one-mile slice was taken off the north side, cutting the acreage down to around 12,000. In the beginning, there were unofficial estimates that $55,000,000 would be spent in constructing the plant. Although actual costs are still held confidential, it is believed that not much more than $30,000,000 went into its original construction, plus possibly another $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 in the conversion program to switch from fuses to aircraft ammunition. And in the list of things about Scioto that never reached the intended levels must be added the prices paid to the farmers whose land was taken. They said they were assured payment not only for the value of their lands, but that some allowance would be made for their farms as "going concerns" for various improvements they had made and even for work they had done toward starting a new crop year. On the strength of this assurance, many said they needed badly, and would have bought other farms, paying substantial prices for them in the conviction that they would receive enough money for their land to justify their new purchases. When the prices finally were announced, a majority of the dispossessed families voiced protests, some of them employing a private appraiser and taking steps to seek a higher settlement in court. One of their complaints was that money was spent liberally for construction purposes at the plant, but they felt that they had been made the targets of about the only economy program they knew of in connection with the war. Government land acquisition representatives contended throughout the proceedings that the farmers were given fair prices. The ordnance plant has poured thousands of dollars into Marion trade channels, but it also has taken out some revenue from the political subdivisions. The property taken over for the plant site was carried on the tax duplicate for approximately $180,000, and the loss of tax revenue from this property is estimated at roughly $8,000 a year.

In the second of the three articles, to be published in tomorrow's Star, several phases of the plant's history, including early speculation about its size and about other military installations, Marion's war-time planning and developments that prevented the plant from reaching its intended size will be covered.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1943

With the end of the war in sight, this becomes one of the major problems of whatever peace may be reached—the protection of a country which has bid for its own extermination in a blood bath. Germans today, not just Nazis but all Germans, are the most hated people in Europe. Their collective responsibility for the butchery and sadism practiced in their name cannot be written off by any formal agreement. It will have to be met in thousands of places on the terms they set by their own conduct. They gave no quarter when they held the whip and they can expect none when they face it.

in addition, a sizable part of it must be written off against rises in the cost of living, unless the government gives in to the labor bloc's argument that all wages should be allowed to rise correspondingly, or—what would be even a better trick—finds some way to hold down the cost of living. The remainder, with the exception of money spent in high living and foolish buying, which go on year in and year out, is being pretty well taken care of at the moment by Americans meeting their obligations, paying off old bills, and saving for a rainy day—something no one in Washington seems to understand. But it still goes on and to speak of it as money that is dangerous for the people to have is perhaps the most annoying misconception foisted on the public in the domestic war of nerves.

"The home is the heart and essence of America," declares Federal Council of Churches. "Happy married companionship and the joy of parenthood and family affection are normal outgrowths of the sexual drive guided and enriched by spiritual affection. But the misuse of sex is one of the greatest causes of individual disaster, family disintegration and social corruption. It is of supreme importance, therefore, that this part of human nature should be thought of on a level of understanding and reverence rather than upon the level of irresponsible gratification or exploitation."

COL. DAVID L. NEUMAN

Old Line German

Officers Reported

Aim To Oust Nazis

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Dec. 1—A junta of old-line professional German soldiers, supported by many Junker industrialists, agrarians and diplomats, is understood to be considering the possibility of overthrowing the present

Hitler government in hopes of winning peace terms which would leave enough of German militarism to form the core of a new world conquest.

This group, according to reports from inside Germany, already has made informal arm-ist overtures, which were not regarded by the allies as tenders at all and which were dismissed without discussion because they did not originate formally with the German government and because they fell far short of the United Nations' unconditional surrender formula.

Warnings against Germany's peace balloons have been given by Secretary of State Hull, British Minister of Information, Benjamin Bracken and others. The Nazis themselves, moreover, would not hesitate to promote such premises in order to create disunity among the allies.

The reports say the anti-Hitler group are convinced there is no hope for a German military victory.

The group is said to have asked these concessions in return for the overthrow of Hitler.

Guarantees that Germany would be occupied by forces from the west or United Nations under a joint American-British command

—a precaution against Russian occupation.

Guarantees that Germany would be permitted to retain a reduced army to insure against civil war, demobilizing gradually after a republican government was elected and established.

Guarantees that Germany would be allowed the right of economic rehabilitation.

RATION POINTS

Sharp increases in point values for all types of cheeses and major canned fish items.

American cheese is rated two points to 10 a pound, while cream cheese is boosted three points to eight points a pound. Such types as Swiss, Munster, and Blue will cost eight points, up two from the November table.

With the exception of oysters,

all rationed canned fish is raised four points to a total of 16 a pound. Oysters are dropped one point to four a pound.

Lard is reduced one point to two points a pound. Shortening and salad and cooking oils remain unchanged at five points a pound.

The reductions in beef point values, together with those made earlier for pork, mean an increase of approximately 30 per cent in the housewife's meat rations for December as compared with the November ration, OPA said.

The agency estimated retail steak will have approximately 1,000,000 pounds of meat for sale to civilians during December, compared with about 1,000,

000,000 pounds originally estimated for November.

Expect Good Supplies

It was pointed out that while supplies of veal, lamb and mutton also are expected to continue fairly good during December, the point value of these meats will be substantially for November and few decreases are possible

this month.

Several of the cheaper pork cuts retain the two-point reduction made ten days ago.

All hams and most bacon cuts are hiked one point, retaining half of the earlier two-point reduction. Such cuts as pork knuckles, which were carried down to a zero rating when the two-point cut was ordered, appear on the December table at one point a pound.

All rationed sausages, with the exception of dry and semi-dry and corned, are hiked two points from the November table.

Rationing officials said that the present sixteen-point value for butter cannot be reduced until production is substantially larger than that estimated for the next few months.
